

Latest President Trump: Rate His Job Performance Here Now.

Home | Newsfront

Tags: Marijuana | Oklahoma | Marijuana | Rapid | Rollout

Oklahoma Quickly Becoming Medical Marijuana Hotbed

(Getty)

Wednesday, 26 December 2018 06:25 AM

Facebook Share Like Twitter Google+ Email Short URL | Email Article | Comment | Contact | Print | A A

The rollout of statewide medical and recreational marijuana programs typically is a grindingly slow process that can take years. Not so in Oklahoma, which moved with lightning speed once voters approved medical cannabis in June.

The ballot question received 57 percent support and established one of the nation's most liberal medical pot laws in one of the most conservative states. Six months later, the cannabis industry is booming.

Farmers and entrepreneurs are racing to start commercial grow operations, and the state is issuing licenses to new patients, growers and dispensary operators at a frantic pace. Retail outlets opened just four months after legalization.

Free Newsmax E-Alerts

Email: [input]
Country: United States
Zip Code: [input]
Privacy: We never share your email.

Hot Topics

- Trump Administration, Russia Probe, 2020 Elections, Donald Trump, Immigration, China

More Hot Topics

Follow Newsmax

Like us on Facebook (1.2M), Follow us on Twitter, Add us on Google Plus

Around The Web

- Expert Says This Strategy Can Stop Fake News, Shocking: Why Trump Won't be Impeached, The Non-Surgical Knee Fix Seniors Swear By, Could This Video End The Democratic Party?, Instant Background Checks - Enter a Name and Feel Safer in Minutes, Media Censored This Rancher... What If He's Right?, 3 Ways Your Dog Asks For Help, Oncologists Freak Out Over True Cause of Cancer, 177 Simple Ways To Make Some Extra Cash In 2019, Men Don't Need Viagra If They Do This Once Daily, You Can Fill In Wrinkles At Home (Here's How), This Revolutionary German Hearing Aid Will Change Your Life, Viagra Can't Compare, New Replacement Cheaper, Faster, Safer

By contrast, voters in North Dakota, Ohio and neighboring Arkansas approved medical pot in 2016 but have yet to see sales begin amid legal wrangling and legislative meddling.

"I think we really are the wild, wild West in many respects," said attorney Sarah Lee Gossett Parrish, whose firm in Norman represents several cannabis businesses. "Here in Oklahoma, we're a pretty independent constituency. We are primarily a red state, but we don't like a lot of government controls."

Indeed, unlike virtually every other state, Oklahoma officials created no list of qualifying medical conditions for people to get medicinal marijuana. That has prompted a flood of applications for personal licenses to purchase pot.

Since August more than 22,000 have been approved and thousands more are in the pipeline. There are now 785 licensed dispensaries. Some small Oklahoma towns have as many as a half-dozen. Norman and Stillwater, the state's two largest college towns, have 45 combined.

Sage Farms is among more than 1,200 licensed commercial growers. Owner Ben Neal has been using high-tech growing techniques for years to produce tomatoes, lettuce, peppers and other vegetables at his six greenhouses in rural Tulsa County. He's now converted a third of his operation to growing marijuana, hired three new workers and just harvested 200 pounds of various strains that will be auctioned next month.

Neal said he has been offered $2,800 per pound for the entire crop, a total of $560,000. He's shocked at how quickly Oklahoma has embraced the industry.

"Nine months ago, I was saying that Oklahoma would be the last state that ever does it, and then all of a sudden this happened," Neal said.

In the bedroom community of Shawnee, east of Oklahoma City, business is steady at the Oklahoma Roots dispensary. Chance Gilbert grows, processes and sells marijuana inside what once was a metal fabrication shop.

"It's kind of radical how fast it's gotten going," said Gilbert, who expects to produce about 50 pounds of marijuana a month once at full capacity. "We assumed it would be an Arkansas model, that it would be years before it was implemented and rolled out."

The primary driver behind Oklahoma's quick rollout was a broadly written, citizen-led ballot question that included quick deadlines and required regulators to grant a license to every qualified applicant. But several political ingredients combined to push the effort along.

First, instead of the general election in November, Gov. Mary Fallin placed the question on the June primary ballot, where it passed overwhelmingly despite opposition from law enforcement, doctors and clergy. That allowed more time for the program to ramp up before the Legislature returns in

▶ TAKE A LOOK

- Trade The Most Popular Forex pairs Like EUR/USD, GBP/USD and 114 More
- Join Bitcoin Investor and Start Generating Money
- Winter electricity bills have you seeing red? Don't invest in big heating systems until you've...
- Protect Your Self Online & Browse Without Restriction With A Lifetime Subscription. Get Your...

Powered by FEEDNETWORK

You May Also Like

Report: Ex-DOJ Spokeswoman Joining CNN as Political Editor

Tuesday, 19 Feb 2019 13:46 PM

The former leading spokeswoman for the Department of Justice under former Attorney General Jeff Sessions is joining CNN . . .

Alabama Newspaper Editor Calls For Return of KKK

Tuesday, 19 Feb 2019 13:25 PM

The United States would be "better off" if the Ku Klux Klan made a revival and lynched Democrats in Washington, D.C., ac . . .

WashPost Fact Checker Blasts Trump for Criticism

Tuesday, 19 Feb 2019 13:15 PM

President Donald Trump said Tuesday that The Washington Post's fact checker is "only for the Democrats," prompting the p . . .

More

TRENDING NEWS

Maduro Reveals Secret Meetings with US Envoy

Gibraltar spits fury as Spanish warship tells UK vessels to leave i...

First Lady Has Successful Breast Cancer Surgery

Could AOC, Tlaib and Omar Be Dems' Blessing in Disguise?

Crocodile Devours Female Indonesian Researcher Alive

Most Commented

Trump to Sign Border Bill and Declare Emergency, McConnell Says

February.

Then, when the Oklahoma State Board of Health tried to impose heavy-handed restrictions, such as banning smoke-able pot and requiring a pharmacist at every dispensary, the public was outraged. Every segment of the pro-marijuana movement mobilized and even the state's Republican attorney general weighed in with a legal opinion that the board had gone too far.

"I think every Oklahoman who has a soul was appalled that they tried to change a political decision that the people of Oklahoma had just made," said Chip Paul, who helped write and push for State Question 788. "After that board meeting and after the attorney general's letter, the third rail of politics would be to mess with SQ 788."

Oklahoma's conservative Legislature took notice. While GOP leaders still plan to implement some general standards for lab testing, packaging and measures to prevent pot from ending up on the black market, they appear in no rush to make wholesale changes.

"I do not see an appetite at all to go in and try to undo the will of the people and get rid of medical marijuana," said state Sen. Greg McCortney, R-Ada, who served on a medical pot task force.

The state's new Medical Marijuana Authority already has raked in more than $7.5 million from registration fees from patients, growers and dispensaries. The first revenue from the new 7 percent sales tax on pot sales began dribbling into state coffers last month.

Even members of law enforcement, who were among the most vocal opponents, appear to accept that the public's attitudes about marijuana have shifted.

"There are many, many people out there who like to go on their back porch in the evening in the privacy of their own homes and they like to smoke marijuana," said Wagoner County Sheriff Chris Elliott, who worked for 27 years as a Tulsa police officer before being elected sheriff. "These are not what you would consider druggies or seedy people. These are people who work, they pay taxes and they go to church. And they've had to sneak around because they've lived in fear of me, law enforcement."

© Copyright 2019 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed.

Click Here to comment on this article

Short URL | Email Article | Comment | Contact | Print | A A

Around The Web

Powered by Newsmax

Expert Says This Strategy Can Stop Fake News

Shocking: Why Trump Won't be Impeached

The Non-Surgical Knee Fix Seniors Swear By

Thursday, 14 Feb 2019 | 1950 comments

Did the rest of the country see what I watched? That is, our president...

Trump Says He'll Declare Border Emergency to Free Up Wall Money

Friday, 15 Feb 2019 | 1396 comments

Finally a president that does what he says he going to do....

Trump Declares Emergency for Border Wall, House Panel Launches Probe

Friday, 15 Feb 2019 | 1176 comments

First sentence of the Constitution requires our government to provide for...

Trump Emergency Declaration Faces Fights in the Courts

Saturday, 16 Feb 2019 | 1202 comments

Yes it will... when libtards start sending their brownshirts to...

McCabe: 'Crime May Have Been Committed' When Trump Fired Comey

Monday, 18 Feb 2019 | 1000 comments

The more these guys talk, the deeper it gets...
